

MULTIFAMILY PROGRAM

Brookfield Apartments saves more than a quarter of a million with energy-saving upgrades from PSO!

PROBLEM:

Brookfield Apartments, now known as Sterling Heights, were looking for ways to affordably improve energy efficiency at their complex so they could save on energy costs without passing the cost of upgrades onto their tenants.

SOLUTION:

There are multiple factors to consider when improving energy efficiency in multifamily housing. PSO provided a top-to-bottom assessment of their property, including: examining insulation levels, evaluating windows and patio doors, and conducting duct blaster and blower door tests. The assessment determined that Brookfield Apartments could benefit from low-flow showerheads, aerators, and residential LED lightbulbs as well.

RESULTS:

Thanks to PSO's Multifamily program, Brookfield Apartments received more than a quarter of a million dollars in rebate savings. These savings allowed them to make a significant portion of their upgrades, free of charge. Due to these upgrades, their tenants' comfort has improved, while the complex is able to save 833,233 kWh annually!
